

Constantly irritated when traveling in inclement weather by car, and attempting to find weather data on the radio, that stations will provide weather updates without identifying where they are located. They are very good about stating their transmission frequency, which I can see by looking at the dial, and their call letters, which are meaningless, but they invariably fail to identify their location. I recommend that they be required to state their location whenever they provide local information. Thank You.